If an employer already provides paid sick leave that meets the amended Colorado HELP Rules, such employers are not required to provide additional leave. However, covered employers that do not provide sufficient paid sick leave pursuant to the amended Colorado HELP Rules must provide eligible employees with the paid sick leave. Employers can provide more sick leave than the Colorado HELP Rules provide. However, an employee who exhausts their paid leave provided by a covered employer, and later qualifies for HELP leave, is entitled to leave pursuant to the amended Colorado HELP Rules.
